How To Select The Right Enterprise6

Perhaps the major emphasis should not be on the "What to produce?" but on the process of "How to select the right enterprise for my farm."

Composting Made Easy 10

Composting is the simple act of recycling and it's as easy to do as taking out the garbage!

Mozzarella Cheese Made From Water Buffalo Milk 12

University of Florida experts say an effort to promote dairy farming with the water buffalo may help U.S. cheese-makers gain a foothold in the gourmet mozzarella market.

Keeping the Wild in Wildlife 14

"The world is overflowing with unwanted dogs and cats that need homes. No one needs to take an animal from the wild for a pet," says wildlife rehabilitator Fran Kitchen. She is founder of Ohio-based Operation Orphan, Inc.

Overcoming Legal Risk 18

Some of the farming methods handed down from 100 years ago may now be against new rules and regulations.

Move Over, Bossie! Sorghum's Not Just for Cows Anymore 22

Last month we featured Indian Rice Grass because it is gluten-free. This month we present sorghum.

Safety – Can Knowledge Prevent Injuries And Deaths? 23

The Michigan Fatality Assessment and Control Evaluation program reports on the work-related death of a farmer who was crushed underneath a rotary mower while changing blades and untangling wire.

Are You Ready For A New Pickup Truck? 26

Today's pickup trucks offer a perfect blend of a true truck bed for hauling cargo and cabs that allow space for your passengers. This is a good time to shop for your new truck.

About the cover

We have an article about new trucks starting on page 26. I was tempted to use a picture of my personal truck, however, I am sure most of you are not interested in a 1994 truck that has 313,000 miles on it. (It is not very photogenic either.) As you know, trucks have changed a lot over the past decade. I mentioned my truck in the article so you would better understand my excitement about an invitation to the introduction of a new truck earlier this year in Arizona on a dude ranch. That is where our cover photo was taken. It is a four-door, Double Cab 2004 Toyota Tundra. I hope the article gives you a starting point for your new truck-shopping trip.
